

ABSTRACT

The APOLLO (monitoring Atmospheric POLLution with earth Observation) project is an innovative project for air quality monitoring funded by ESA in the framework of the Data User Element Innovators II programme. A service for estimating the tropospheric ozone from satellite data is set up. To this purpose the measurements provided by the OMI mission are considered and a neural network retrieval algorithm has been designed.